SINGING

By: Cecil May Jr.

We sing “psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs” to teach and admonish one another (Ephesians 5:19; Colossians 3:16). Many efforts have been made to distinguish a psalm from a hymn from a spiritual song, but none have found wide acceptance.

We recognize, however, that “psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs,” as a group, are distinguished from drinking songs, love ballads, war songs, comic ditties, etc.

The sentiment, the words of the song, accomplish the purposes for which we are directed to sing them: praising God and teaching and admonish one another. Tempo and harmony are important, but the words are more so.

Singing can accomplish both purposes. Organs, pianos, keyboards, guitars, and drum sets accomplish neither.
